Massimo Alba, Ponte
Knitwear and more

Set over two floors of the baroque-style Palazzo Lancellotti near Piazza Navona, Milan-based fashion designer Massimo Alba's boutique has a welcoming feel to it because he's decorated the interior with furnishings from his own home; appropriately, his shop sits on a street that is home to antique dealers. There is a vintage wood-and-glass counter once used by a tailor in northern Italy and he's had Persian rugs dyed in cool shades of blue, using the same eco-friendly methods that go into colouring his sought-after range of knitwear made from Italian cashmere.

Visit to pick up casual, elegant shirts, shorts and pants. The sumptuously soft fabrics sport original patterns created in-house.
